

Answers to Questions on Man's Role in the Microcosm

Q. In one of your articles, you mention our cosmos being in the process of assimilating other cosmoses. Have we now assimilated all cosmoses? And what is a cosmos – where individuated life is or where any form of creation is? What is the distinction between creation and individuated life?

A. Let's divide this into separate sections:

- A cosmos lying outside our own, that could possibly be assimilated by us, is actually a place where we have already been prior to descending. Wherever there are life forms is a place from which we descended. During our ascension, we have completely assimilated, and ascended through, any realm or cosmos (a realm is a specific level of a cosmos), where life had previously existed in form. Where we are now, we have never been before.
- What we are now assimilating are levels of un-individuated consciousness with no individuations within them. The difference between individuations and creations is that an individuation is strictly an individuated consciousness, whereas creations, as a generic term, can also include the form a consciousness takes. Creations can consist of an individuated consciousness (each of us in physicality consisting of a consciousness superimposed over all that is), and form. The first part of creation is to individuate consciousness, much the same way one of our sub-personalities, such as the inner child, is an individuated consciousness within us. The second step is for those individuated consciousnesses to create form within the various realms of a cosmos. This is where our higher selves come from – our formed aspects in higher and higher realms. In cosmoses where we had been before, we encounter higher aspects of ourselves. Because life is bursting into higher and higher realms where we have never been before, we no longer encounter higher aspects (forms) of ourselves there.

Q. What is it that we are doing instead of integrating higher aspects? How do we guide our own lives under these circumstances?

A. We used to encounter higher aspects of ourselves outside of the cosmos. We now have higher aspects of ourselves within the cosmos only.

Q. So these are like new higher aspects?

A. As the cosmos grows and ascends, as it is currently doing, our higher aspects or selves are continually changing in the following way:

- We are a consciousness spread across the cosmos, filling all portions and aspects of life within its boundaries. The cosmos is like a life form that pulses between complexity and simplicity. At times it has more realms than others. The number of our higher selves is therefore based on the number of levels of life in our cosmos at any given time. Our higher selves are simply those portions of our consciousness waiting for us in those levels.
- The cosmic realms are like our bodies. We have carefully described the bodies of man in most of our books, particularly the more refined bodies surrounding the physical body. Our cosmos, no matter how large it grows through assimilating more oceans of consciousness, is nevertheless divided into orderly segments, forming higher and higher realms.

There are exactly 1920 realms within our cosmos at this time. Individuated life and form, other than that of the Mother and Father, only exist in the lower 288 levels. Each of us has a higher aspect in each of the lower 288 realms, each life guided by its own 287 higher selves above the physical. So as you can see, there are multiple higher selves helping us in our lives. They make sure that no great harm or interference prevents us from living our lives as intended. Since the cosmic ascension began in February 2005, a great deal more self-determinism has been given to our physical aspects. Physical life has greater discernment and wisdom. Signs in our environment - dream images are an example - provide more guidance than we would generally receive from our higher selves.

Q. If diversity of perspective is so important at the level of material life, why then should we be engaged in encouraging everyone to expand their perception as much as possible?

A. The term 'diversity of perspective' needs to be explained. It is something that the Infinite Mother of all life has relied upon to maximize opportunities for learning. The part that is commonly misunderstood, however, is that we fulfill the function of giving diverse perspectives to the Infinite only when we are living to our fullest capacity of perception. In other words, think of this diversity as resulting from the following scenario: Mother's light shines through the lenses of her individuated creations. Some are smaller lenses than others, and can reflect but smaller pictures. Nevertheless, what they reflect is unique in its contribution, in that there is no other lens like theirs. So even though they may be exploring a smaller portion of creation through their individual expression, it is as important as a larger piece. If one strand is removed from the spider's web, it becomes incomplete and unstable. Everyone who has deserved the right to live at these high levels, has the right to the fullest clarity of their lens through which Mother can shine Her light.

Q. Is there cause for concern as indicated by some of the prophetic warnings in connection with the year 2012?

A. In February 2005 the Earth began an accelerated ascension. That affected life throughout the cosmos. Instead of ascending in a predictable, graduated fashion as foretold (by mystics), Earth moved through a membrane into empty space, pulling the cosmos behind her.

Time ceased to function in the manner we were accustomed to. Prophecies became invalid overnight. Technically, we have long since sped past the year 2012.

Q. So are the prophecies of huge deluges and world wars gone?

A. On a global scale, absolutely. Because time has accelerated, more changes that would have taken place over the course of many years are occurring in rapid succession. But no major, world-wide cataclysms are foreseen.

Q. What are some of the things that have been prevented by the rise in Earth's frequency during its ascension?

A. Multiple engineered epidemics - major earthquakes in Southern California, Mexico City, Nevada - riots and racial wars in Los Angeles. Also, many controlling mechanisms planned by those who hoped to control humanity through spreading terror will not be implemented.

Q. Let's talk about the few behind the scenes who have been part of the drive for global government. What about them?

A. Many beings on Earth, as well as multiple races throughout the cosmos, that were not sufficiently life-enhancing to exist at higher levels have simply ceased to be. With every onward shift, more of them just vanished. Those you speak about were among them.

Q. What do you mean by "simply ceased to be"? How could a being exist one moment and not the next?

A. Material reality is just that fluid and the less material realms change far more rapidly. So a race could exist one day and not the next. With material life it can also be this way. Often though, souls can leave and bodies can function in a soulless state for a time until those bodies die.

Q. Does this mean the races that have been abducting humans for self-serving and hostile reasons have disappeared?

A. Yes, they have. In 2005 the Infinite Mother of Creation called abducted souls that had been taken to other planets back into Earth's spirit world. At that time there were more than a million of them, excluding those being abducted but not removed permanently from Earth.

Q. What is the significance of only a few being able to recognize the dramatic ascension which is occurring and being able to perceive the results of entering into higher realms? Most still witness life changing in a predictable and un-miraculous way?

A. There's an explanation for this and then there is the issue of significance.

The explanation is that if everyone changes at once but the media still publishes the old stories, how will anyone know that the changes have occurred? If we cling to our belief systems, yet the heart of everyone around us have changed, that too will have the tendency to pull the old sets of circumstances and ways of relating in again. With our belief systems held tightly in place, our ideas of right and wrong, we tend to perpetuate the illusion of our past.

The miracle, therefore, requires extreme fluidity to perceive. The significance of this is that the Earth has served as an anchor for a cosmos full of beings who have felt they are changing TOO rapidly. Because they can perceive every change and because the cosmos has been synchronized to humanity's time, the density at which man still chooses to live has slowed things down and provided an anchor.

Q. But is there not some further significance in that the majority of Mother's creatures are not aware of what is happening?

A. The majority is aware. In fact, it's the smallest portion that isn't.

Q. Of course! I often forget that WE are the smallest portion. Do you have a sense of when the rest of humanity will recognize this?

A. It is very difficult to predict this because of the multiple layers of changes that need to take place on a daily basis to get the huge picture of the cosmos to pivot. My hope is within four years, which is around 2011.

Q. You have said that major cataclysms and earth changes are over. How do you explain the local disasters happening?

A. Global disasters produce shock that lowers consciousness. The effects have been the waves of compassion felt by the rest of the world for the plights of the people in these areas, as well as the lessening of natural boundaries and exclusivity. It is also true that tremendous purging of the Earth's people and landmasses has been going on for approximately one month. I plan to speak on this in one of our student video clips soon.

When I said that major catastrophes would no longer happen to the Earth, I was very specifically referring to the Scallion-type predictions and the massive types of Earth changes that have occurred multiple times in the past, wiping out most of life. Although many disasters have been prevented by the Earth's ascension, there will be localized purges taking place where change is resisted.

Q. Why do you emphasize our relationship to the macrocosm as the microcosm, and what is our special relationship with the All or the macrocosm?

A. In order to achieve awareness, power is needed. Power is the result of increasing perception. At the most practical level, the benefit of looking at this very large picture is the immediate increase in personal power. This in turn produces more energy, producing higher consciousness.
